IN 1792, four Bishops constituted the House of Bishops in the General Convention. At that time, the Rev. T. G. Claggett was consecrated Bishop of Maryland, the first Episcopal consecration in America. ✠

In 1895, there were seventy-nine Bishops in the American Church. Every state in the United States, China, Japan and Africa are represented by their Bishops, Clerical and Lay Deputies. ✠ ✠ ✠

The General Convention of 1901, is the forty-fourth since the existence of the American Church. ✠ ✠ ✠ ✠

GREETINGS FROM THE MAYOR OF SAN FRANCISCO

SAN FRANCISCO is honored by the meeting of the General Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church, and, on behalf of our citizens, I bid its members a most cordial welcome and wish success to its deliberations.

It is gratifying to observe that our city is frequently selected for distinguished gatherings and that no longer we may regard ourselves as remote from the great interests of the country—spiritual, educational and industrial.

JAMES D. PHELAN,
Mayor.

The Church in California.

TO find the beginning of the Church in California, as represented by the Anglican Branch of the great Catholic Communion, one must go back to the sixteenth century, to the services held by the Rev. Francis Fletcher, a priest of the Church of England, and the chaplain of Sir Francis Drake in his expedition into these far western seas. It was in the year 1579, while lying to in what is now known as Drake's Bay, a little north of the Golden Gate, that it is recorded that Chaplain Fletcher held the first services according to the use of the English Prayer Book, not only in California, but anywhere in the territory now covered by the United States. It is not for us to say how much or how little has endured from the beginning then made—we only note the event as one of significance in this connection.

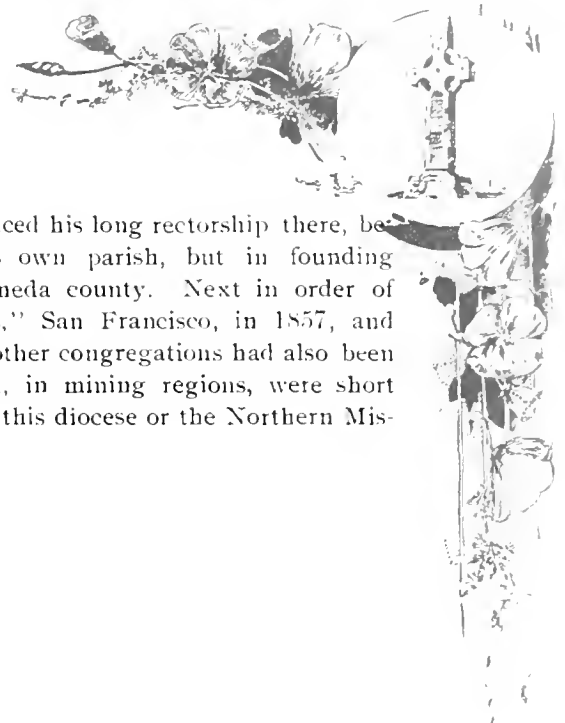

ST. STEPHEN'S CHURCH
SAN FRANCISCO

Among the Argonauts who came to this coast in 1849-50 were many of the choice young laymen of the East, representing the best manhood of the country, not only physically and intellectually, but spiritually as well, howbeit the quest for gold was the immediate incentive to the hardship and peril of the long journey overland or by way of the fever-infected isthmus. Many names among the Pioneers appear later in the honor rolls of the diocese, as one looks through the Convention Journals such as Stanly, Winans, Graves, Gibbs, Harmon, Eastman, Randolph and Babcock.

There came also, partly, it may be, in search of health, but fired as well with missionary zeal, the Rev. Flavel Scott Mines, who held the first Church service in San Francisco, on July 8th, 1849, in a hotel dining room, assisted by the Rev. Augustus Fitch. Two weeks later the first parish organization was formed under the name of "The Holy Trinity Church," with the Rev. Mr. Mines as rector. Shortly afterwards the name of the Parish was changed to that of Trinity Church. The next parish formed was that of Grace Church, Sacramento, and shortly afterwards, in April, 1850, Grace Church, San Francisco, with the Rev. J. L. Ver Mehr as rector. Next came St. John's Church, Stockton, in 1850. St. John's Church, Oakland, began as a missionary parish in 1855, and in 1858 the Rev. Benjamin Akerly commenced his long rectorship there, being instrumental not only in building up his own parish, but in founding also several other missions and parishes in Alameda county. Next in order of time was St. John's Church, "Mission Dolores," San Francisco, in 1857, and the Church of the Advent in 1858. Some ten other congregations had also been formed in various interior towns, some of which, in mining regions, were short lived, while others are now doing good work in this diocese or the Northern Missionary Jurisdiction.

CHRIST CHURCH
ALAMEDA

The first church building was put up by Holy Trinity Parish on the southwest corner of Powell and Jackson streets, and occupied in October, 1849. Within two years and a half, this building having been outgrown, a corrugated iron church was erected by the vestry on Pine street, between Montgomery and Kearny. The first building for the parish of Grace Church was a temporary chapel on the northwest corner of Powell and Jackson streets, early in 1850; this was followed the next year by a more substantial structure, which was occupied till 1862, when the present handsome brick church, corner of California and Stockton streets, was ready for use.

The first church in Stockton was of brick, and was consecrated in 1858. It has since been replaced by a handsome church building and a parish house. Trinity Parish, San Francisco, provided itself with a large wooden building on the corner of Post and Powell streets, in 1867, which has more recently given way to the present substantial stone church in which the General Convention is holding its sessions.

ST. LUKE'S CHURCH

There are some interesting and curious incidents connected with the first steps toward the organization of a diocese in California. The General Convention and the Board of Missions were slow to act, or to appreciate the needs of this new, far western community. For a short time both clergy and laity here felt orphaned, and there was some thought of an independent diocese, or even of seeking fellowship with the Greek Communion; and then, in August, 1850, the first convention, without waiting for any "enabling act," or organic connection with the General Church, proceeded to elect the Rt. Rev. Horatio Southgate to be their bishop. Dr. Southgate promptly declined.

In 1853 the second convention of the would-be diocese was held, with three clergymen canonically resident, and five parishes recognized as entitled to representation, and application was made for admission to the General Convention that same year. This application was rejected because of the defective status of the diocese, and instead, the General Convention determined at last to send here a Missionary Bishop. Dr. Wm. Ingraham Kip, of Albany, was chosen for the purpose and consecrated, and arrived on this coast in 1854.

The new bishop was loyally received, and entered immediately with great enthusiasm upon his long and wise administration of the Church in California. In this day of railroads and palace cars it is hard to realize the hundreds of miles of stage riding required of a missionary bishop in California. A special convention in 1857 showed its appreciation of Bishop Kip's worth by unanimously electing him diocesan bishop. In 1869 the first of the general church institutions now well known in the diocese was founded the Home for Old Ladies. This was followed in 1871 by St. Luke's Hospital, and still later by the two church orphanages, the Bishop Armitage for boys, and the Maria Kip for girls, and also the Sheltering Arms where Sister Julia's merciful work is done: then quite recently the Tennant Home, near Pacific Grove. These institutions all have premises and buildings of their own, in most instances quite creditable in size and appearance, and for the most part free of debt and fairly well sustained. While not strictly a diocesan institution the Church Divinity School, at San Mateo, should at least be mentioned. There is also a Diocesan House, the gift of the late George W. Gibbs, and the beginning of a cathedral system, with its mission chapel, reading rooms, Sunday school and guild hall, Boys' Home, etc., on Second Street, near Folsom; while on the city front there is an admirably conducted Seamen's Mission.

In the year 1874 the diocese was divided by having about one third of its area set off as the Missionary Jurisdiction of Northern California, now known as the District of Sacramento; and in 1895 another division was effected by the erection of the Diocese of Los Angeles, embracing the southern third part of the State.

In 1890 the present bishop, the Rt. Rev. Dr. Wm. Ford Nichols, began his episcopate as assistant to Bishop Kip, and became the Diocesan when Bishop Kip died in 1893.

The diocese was incorporated in 1887, under a general law of the State, specially devised for the purpose. This law, and the diocesan corporation formed under it, are unique in providing not only that the directors are elected by the Diocesan Convention, but that the by-laws also are made by the convention. This corporation holds the titles of the property of missions, and holds and administers the various trust and endowment funds of the diocese.

The missionary system includes, with the Bishop, an Archdeacon, three convocations with their Deans and a Board of Missions. The Archdeacon has a corps of workers, consisting of sixteen clergymen and twelve lay readers, all under the Bishop's general direction, and known as the "Cathedral Staff for Missions," by means of which a very large amount of missionary work is accomplished at from thirty-five to forty points, where for one reason or another the more settled parochial or mission system is for the time at least in abeyance.

The total amount of money raised in and expended last year in the whole missionary system of the diocese, including the Cathedral Mission, was nearly $35,000, a gain of more than $10,000 over the year before. Several sisters and one deaconess are at work in various capacities, and systematic attention is given to the spiritual needs of such great public institutions as the San Francisco Hospital and Alms House, over seventy communicants being enrolled at the last named.

There are in the diocese thirty-two parishes, thirty-eight missions and twenty-four unorganized mission stations, eighty-one priests and deacons, and nearly ten thousand communicants. The invested trust and endowment funds amount to nearly $100,000.

A BIT OF ELIZABETHAN CALIFORNIA.

BY THE RT. REV. WILLIAM F. NICHOLS, D. D.

SOME eleven centuries before it was called England, the country of the white cliffs was named Albion. And a generation before there was a New England on the Atlantic, there was a New Albion on the Pacific coast of the New World. In the British Museum the "side plan" of the map of Hondius, 1595, shows the Portus Novæ Albionis with all the quaint features of the old cartography: the ship of Sir Francis Drake, nearly as long as the width of the point of land which makes the "convenient and fit harbor-ough" of the narrative of the voyage in The World Encompassed. The natives, the trees, houses, and mountains, take all sorts of liberties with perspective, but leave no room for mistake about the purport of the sketch. "This country our General [Drake] named Albion," says the writer of the narrative — probably Francis Fletcher, Drake's chaplain and chronicler — "and that for two causes, the one in respect of the white banks and cliffs which lie toward the sea, the other that it might have some affinity even in name also with our country, which was sometime so called."

So long as an historic event is without its definite historic spot, and may have happened in any one of the several places claimed for it, the antiquary can never find his true relish of it. We remember the story of the unsophisticated visitor to

Mount Vernon who wept copiously at the ice-house, until informed by the gardener that the tomb was "further on," but she obviously had not the true instinct of the antiquary. That will not let one rest until he is sure of the historic spot, if there be any way of settling it. Much interest has been drawn to and considerable has been written about the landing of Sir Francis Drake on that memorable voyage when, with the Pelican—afterwards named the Golden Hinde, in honor of Sir Christopher Hatton's coat of arms—he "ploughed a furrow around the world." Not to speak of the works of the Hakluyt Society, and the older accounts of the voyage, the editor of The History of the American Episcopal Church, Bishop Perry, called attention to the fact that to Francis Fletcher, Drake's chaplain, "belongs the honor of being the first in English orders who ministered the Word and Sacraments within the territory of the United States," and that at Drake's landing-place "the words of the Common Prayer were first heard on the Pacific Coast." Dr. Edward Everett Hale, in the Narrative and Critical History of America, furnishes a chapter on Hawkins and Drake, followed by a "Critical Essay on Drake's Bay," all of which has his characteristic charm of telling and of carrying the reader with him. The "Editorial Notes on the Sources of Information" which follow Dr. Hale's contribution give an exhaustive list of authorities and views. And yet the question where the "faire and good bay" was, had to be left undecided, with a preponderating opinion in favor of San Francisco Bay. There was really, when all was said, no such case made out for any point as to relieve the mind of the lurking suspicion that, after all, it might have been at some other point.

It was not until March, 1889, that a paper was read before the California Historical Society which had the assuring title "Identification of Sir Francis Drake's Anchorage on the Coast of California in the year 1579." The writer was Professor George Davidson, Ph.D., Sc.D., of the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey. With the fullness and compactness of a brief, and yet with the style and accessories of an enthusiastic student, he justifies his title. After referring to his gathering in "unofficial hours" notes of his geographical experience upon this coast since 1859, and to the opinion which he first entertained that "Drake entered the Bay of San Francisco," he tells us that his work upon the different editions of the Coast Pilot impelled him to "examine the localities mentioned by the old navigators, to weigh carefully their simple language, the circumstances attending their descriptions, whether they were in detail or in broad generalizations, at what season of the year they were made, etc." The paper leaves one with the impression that the last word has been said, and that the bay so long known as Drake's Bay is entitled to its name.

We honor the pioneers of '49 in California with the name of Argonauts, and it is of interest to find the chronicler of Drake's voyage around the world avowing that his "valiant enterprise . . . doth overmatch the ancient Argonauts." A considerable space is given in The World Encompassed to the time spent at Drake's Bay, from June 17 to July 23, 1579. It will repay careful study from many stand-points. It might well be called Experiences and Impressions of California in 1579. The ethnological student will find much about the natives, their customs, and even about their language. There is a lengthy dissertation about climate, with a tribute to "thicke mists and . . . fogges." There had been gold-prospecting—there were riches and treasures "wherewith in the upland countries it abounds." Another account adds, "There is no part of earth here to bee taken up wherein there is not some special likelihood of gold or silver." And for archaeological zest there are hints about Drake's ship and discipline to project before us the "English Hero."

"Drake, whom the encompassed World so fully knew
When both the Poles of Heaven at once did view
If men are silent, Sun and Stars will care
To register thour Fellow Traveller."

The praise in this verse is far from faint; and the claim of originality in making "passengaire" rhyme with "care" in Mr. Clemens' celebrated verse must now be waived. But we see Drake as Charles Kingsley pictures him in Westward Ho—"that short, sturdy, plainly dressed [but on this particular voyage he wore a scarlet cap with a gold band] man, the keen gray eyes, the bullet head of crisp brown hair, and the wrinkled forehead, as well as the high cheek bones, the short square face, the broad temples, the thick lips which are yet as firm as granite. A coarse, plebeian stamp of man; yet the whole figure and attitude are that of boundless determination, self possession, energy." We see the young commander in his cabin, before which stands the constant sentinel, in that 100-ton ship, where he had not omitted to make provision "for ornament and delight," carrying with him "expert musitians, rich furniture (all the vessels for his table, yea, many belonging euen to the cooke-roome, being of pure silver), and divers shewes of all sorts of curious workmanship." Well can we understand the interest in that ship on her return to England, after her nearly three years' voyage, with the then almost fabulous captured treasure, "being very richly fraught with golde, silver, silke, pearls, and precious stones," some of which it must have been which later led the Spanish King to send his mandate to Queen Elizabeth asking restitution, to bring out her characteristic reply in Latin verse:

Ad Grecas, bone rex, fiant mandata kalendas.

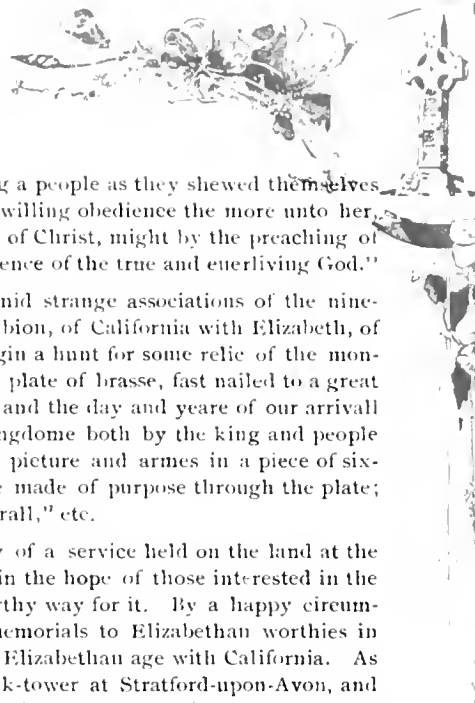

The Queen's visit to the ship at Deptford, her banqueting on it and knighting Drake, Holinshed's wish that some monument of it "might remain to succeeding ages," "and none more fitted than the brittle bark . . . thought meete to be fixed upon the stumpe of Paul's steeple [!] in lieu of the spire, that, being discerned farre and neere, it might be noted and pointed at of people with these true termes: 'Yonder is the barke that hath sailed round about the world,'" is all delightfully Elizabethan. Scholars of Winchester school are said to have written Latin verses and set them up mast of the ship; laid up her cabin distinguished day banquets. Life of Drake, have our sup-Petronell Flash, called England Jonson and our supper on cis Drake's ship passed the the ship had fit to decay, a chair her timbers and Charles II. to of Oxford, and seen in the Bod-inscribed with ten by Cowley, who visits the should take the see that chair. nians can see in an Elizabethan fornia history. of Elizabeth's—England's—ships and most it is part of the was careened on Drake's Bay in 1579. It will not affect the historical interest in the episode even if the claim did not perpetuate itself. The natives formally offered and Drake formally accepted "their right and title in the whole land." "Our General," says the chronicler—and it is easy to see a chaplain's style—"thought not meet to reject or refuse the same, both for that he would not give them any cause for of mistrust or disliking of him . . . and chiefly for that he knew not to what good end God had brought this to passe, or what honour and profit it might bring to our Countrie in time to come. Wherefore, in the name and to the use of her most excellent majesty, he took the scepter, crowne, and dignity of the sayd countrie into his hand; wishing nothing more than that it had layen so fitly for her majesty to enjoy, as it was now her proper owne, and that the riches and treasure thereof . . . might with as great conveniency be transported, to the enriching of her kingdome here at home, as it is in plenty to be attained there; and especially that so tractable and loving a people as they shewed themselves to be, might haue meanes to haue manifested their most willing obedience the more unto her, and by her meanes, as a mother and nurse of the Church of Christ, might by the preaching of the Gospell be brought to the right knowledge and obedience of the true and euerliving God."

To walk along that Drake's Bay beach, then, is to be amid strange associations of the nineteenth with the sixteenth century, of new with old Albion, of California with Elizabeth, of the shore-line with Drake. One is almost tempted to begin a hunt for some relic of the monument Drake set up before leaving the bay, "namely, a plate of brasse, fast nailed to a great and firme post, whereon is engraven her grace's name, and the day and yeare of our arrivall there, and of the free giving up of the province and kingdome both by the king and people into her majestie's hands; together with her highnesse picture and armes in a piece of six-pence currant English monie shewing itselfe by a hole made of purpose through the plate; underneath was likewise engraven the name of our Generall," etc.

A memorial of the landing of Drake, and especially of a service held on the land at the time of his stay in Drake's Bay, had been for some time in the hope of those interested in the matter, when individual generosity made an entirely worthy way for it. By a happy circumstance, one who was the first American citizen to place memorials to Elizabethan worthies in England gave the monument to mark the contact of the Elizabethan age with California. As he placed the Shakespeare memorial fountain and clock-tower at Stratford-upon-Avon, and the Bishop Andrewes (with Bishop Ken) memorial reredos in the church of SS. Thomas and Clement, Winchester, so Mr. George W. Childs, of Philadelphia, erected on American soil this monument to events associated with the same period. The Herbert and Cowper window in Westminster Abbey, the Milton window in St. Margaret's, Westminster, the monument to the astronomer Proctor in Greenwood, carry national ties to and fro across the Atlantic; this one carries them across the continent and the Pacific, making them, like Drake's ship, encompass the world.

The monument is a great gray-stone Celtic cross with base six feet high and 17x15. The cross rises 55 feet from the ground, with shaft 8x6, the arms being 21 feet across, all of stone. The Park Commissioners of San Francisco, through their president, Mr. William W. Stowe, tendered a site for the monument in Golden Gate Park, on an elevation of upwards of 300 feet, on which it is visible from the Golden Gate and from far out at sea. The designs were furnished by Messrs. Coxhead & Coxhead, architects of San Francisco, Colonel George H. Mendel, United States Engineers, being the consulting engineer. The stone is from the quarry of the Sites Sandstone Company at Colusa, California.

The cross was unveiled January 1, 1894, at the opening of the Midwinter Fair, in the presence of a large number of churchmen and citizens. Dr. George Davidson made an historical address and the late Mr. William W. Stowe formally received it in behalf of the Park Commissioners, the Bishop of the Diocese presenting it in behalf of Mr. Childs, the President of the Midwinter Fair, Mr. M. H. de Young, presiding.

The inscription on the cross, properly known as the "Prayer Book Cross," is as follows:

"Consecrated January 1, A. D. 1804, as Memorial of the service held on the shore of Drake's Bay, about St. John Baptist's Day, June 24, A. D. 1579, by Francis Fletcher, Priest of the Church of England, Chaplain of Sir Francis Drake, Chronicler of the Service."

[On the Reverse.]

"First Christian Service in the English tongue on our coast.
"First use of Book of Common Prayer in our country.
"One of the first recorded Missionary Prayers on our continent.
"Soli Deo sit semper Gloria."

[On Base Front.]

"Gift of George W. Childs, Esq., of Philadelphia."

The following extract from the World Encompassed more especially bears upon the points covered in the inscription, giving an account of the service held, and making record of the words of the very early American missionary prayer:

"Our Generall, with his companie, in the presence of those strangers, fell to prayers; and by signes, in lifting up our eyes and hands to heaven, signified unto them that that God whom we did serve, and whom they ought to worship, was above. beseeching God, if it were his good pleasure, to open by some meanes their blinded eyes that they might in due time be called to the knowledge of him, the true and ever-living God, and of Jesus Christ whom he hath sent, the salvation of the Gentiles. In the time of which prayers, singing of Psalms, and reading of certaine chapters of the Bible, they sate very attentively."

THE REVEREND WILLIAM H. PLATT, D. D., Rector of Grace Church from 1871 to 1881, was a man of more than ordinary mental attainments.

He was born in New York, near the Connecticut line, and was practically self educated. He taught school in the Southern States, and prepared himself for the bar, and was at one time a law partner of the late Peter G. Burnett, California's first Governor. At the outbreak of the Mexican War he organized a company of volunteers, and was its captain during the war. Shortly after his return to Mobile he abandoned the practice of law and was ordained a minister of the church, his first parish being at Selma, Alabama. He was then at Petersburg, Va., Louisville, Ky., San Francisco, Cal., and Rochester, N. Y., at which place he resigned his charge in 1891. Dr. Platt was a frequent contributor to clerical and lay publications. He wrote a text-book on art, which he published in San Francisco in 1872. He also, as a reply to Ingersoll, published "After Death, What?" and "God Out and Man In," "Legal Ethics," "Is Religion Dying?" and a novel, were other contributions of his to the literature of the country. At New York in 1891 he delivered the Bishop Paddock lectures before the New York Theological Society. These lectures were published in book form under the title of "The Philosophy of the Supernatural." On account of the deep thought displayed in them he was made a member of the Royal Philosophical Society of Great Britain.

After his retirement from the ministry until his death, which occurred at Petersburg, Virginia, on December 18, 1898, he devoted himself to literature mainly, though he always took an active interest in church affairs

A VISIT TO CALIFORNIA is not complete without a sojourn at Hotel Vendome, San Jose, and trip from there to Lick Observatory, Mt Hamilton, second largest observatory in the world. The Hotel with its desirable location, pleasant surroundings, magnificent architecture, broad verandas, artistic furnishings and unexcelled cuisine is known and remembered the world over by travelers.

The ride to Mt. Hamilton through fertile Santa Clara Valley with its country homes, orchards, flowers and natural foliage, and the mountain and valley scenery along the twenty-six miles of road, all leaves a never-to-be-forgotten impression upon the mind of the traveler.

The view of the heavens through the large telescope, together with the valuable explanations cheerfully furnished by the scientists and professors make the trip as instructive as it is delightful.

GEO. P. SNELL, MANAGER

TOURISTS visiting California and Californians visiting San Jose, should avail themselves of the opportunity offered for a visit to the Great Lick Observatory on the summit of Mt. Hamilton.

It is the least expensive and of greater importance than any of the many attractions on the Pacific Coast.

The smooth, graded road built by Santa Clara county at an expense of $75,000 and pronounced by all to be the best mountain road in the world, makes it possible for invalids and elderly people to make the trip without fatigue.

A GOOD INCOME FOR LIFE

MAY BE SECURED BY INVESTING IN

La Zacualpa Rubber Plantation

THE only plantation shipping rubber in commercial quantities from its own cultivated and wild trees, and from this source paying a legitimate guaranteed dividend on its cash shares.

WHAT A SHARE REPRESENTS.

Shares in La Zacualpa Rubber Plantation are not capital stock of a corporation, and carry none of the responsibilities and obligations, or liability to assessment, of capital stock; but represent an undivided interest in the plantation itself. The twelve thousand acres comprising the plantation are divided into twelve thousand shares, each share representing one acre of land, and the holders of shares in La Zacualpa Rubber Plantation are the actual owners of one undivided acre of land for each share held, with a guarantee expressed upon the certificate by La Zacualpa Rubber Plantation Company, under its official seal, to plant two hundred or more rubber trees per acre for each share sold, and to care for same for a period of five years, and at the expiration of that time to gather the first harvest and deliver the net proceeds thereof to the shareholder, and thereafter to care for the plantation on a ten per cent commission basis.

HOW SHARES ARE SOLD.

Interest-Bearing Cash Shares, $100. These shares bear interest at the rate of five per cent per annum for five years, payable January 15th and July 15th of each year, per coupons attached to the certificate, after which time the profits are derived from the harvests of rubber.
